内容概要

本书共分三大部分：概述、详解和模拟题。

详解部分对听力的各个部分进行题型分解、重点、难点及考点分析，提供应对策略，按场景分类解析，并附常用单词、词组及句型。

之后为复习者配备相关练习对学习效果进行即时检测。

第三部分为十套模拟仿真题以备读者做实战练习之用。

本书编者均为同济大学和上海交通大学的一线骨干教师，长期从事大学英语教学和研究工作，对四、六级考试的题型设计，重点、难点有非常深入而细致的研究。

相信本书能对参加四、六级考试的学生起到很好的指导作用。

章节摘录

His study of history made him wish the Olympic Games were still being held. He was sure that bringing amateur athletes together would promote friendly relations between the countries. It was this conviction that led him to announce he wanted to revive the Olympic Games. He made this announcement in a meeting at the Union of French Societies of Athletic Sports for which he was Secretary General. No one really believed him and his statement was greeted with little enthusiasm. Coubertin was not discouraged and on 23 June, 1894 he founded the International Olympic Committee in a ceremony held at the University of Sorbonne in Paris. Demetrius from Greece became the first president of the IOC. Two years later the first Olympic Games of the modern era was held in Athens. On that occasion Coubertin was elected the second president of the IOC and he remained president until 1925. Due to the 1st World War Coubertin requested permission to establish the headquarters of the IOC in Lausanne Switzerland which was a neutral country. Coubertin suddenly died of a heart attack on September 2, 1937 in Geneva. He was buried in Lausanne, though his heart was buried separately in a monument near the ruins of ancient Olympia. Questions 19 to 22 are based on the passage you have just heard.

19. Why did Coubertin wish to revive the Olympic Games? 20. How did people first react to his announcement? 21. When was the first Olympic Games of the modern era held? 22. Why did Coubertin request permission to establish the headquarters of the IOC in Lausanne?

Passage Three Fast food, a mainstay of American eating for decades, may have reached a plateau in the United States as the growing baby-boom generation looks for a more varied menu. Fast food still represents a $ 102-billion-a-year industry, but growth has turned sluggish recently among tough competition from retail food stores and a richer population willing to try new things and spend more. Signs of trouble in fast food include price-cutting by industry leaders, including efforts by McDonalds to attract customers with a 55-cent hamburger. O'Pepsico, for example, is selling its fast-food restaurant division that includes Taco Bell, Pizza Hut and KFC. According to the Food Marketing Institute, consumers are using supermarkets for 21 percent of take-home food, nearly double the level of a year ago. While fast-food restaurants still lead, their share fell significantly, from 48 percent in 2005 to 41 percent in 2006. Consumers have never been more demanding than they are today. Their tastes are increasingly different. Meanwhile, the aging of the baby-boom population and the growth in the number of so-called "empty nesters" with grown children have meant a rise in the number of people willing to spend more for expensive items. Some 18 million baby boomers will become empty-nesters in the next 10 years, leaving them with more income available to spend on eating out. This generation will have the luxury of being more selective as their children leave home.

Questions 23 to 25 are based on the passage you have just heard. 23. Why is fast food industry going downhill according to the passage? 24. What was fast-food restaurants market share in 2005? 25. What is the main purpose of this passage?
