章节摘录

版权页： Further Reading Can Social Status Bar True Love ?

Bridget Amaraegbu From time, all societies pay allegiance to hierarchy among their members. There are leaders and followers, elite class and the poor class, urban and rural dwellers, the strong and the weak, rich and poor, servants and masters. The world is full of opposites. In every society, social status has continued to remain a major barrier to love. It is common to hear people say their children won't marry a particular person because he doesn't belong to their class. Several marriages and other relationships have equally failed because of differences in education, socialization, religion, race, ethnicity, or income. In most cases, education has remained the major focus. Going by statistics, many graduates, especially women, will not want to marry a low level certificate holder as they feel that the man would be timid and inferior, while some think he will always feel jealous. Also, some men do not feel comfortable that their women earn higher than they do. So, they feel oppressed and ashamed in such marriages, which has led to many broken homes. While some other group of men believe they can't control their women because she earns higher. This week, we are taking a look at some of those issues relating to class distinction which can affect our happiness. I won't settle for less. Porttia Yamahan, Actress Let's be realistic and leave sentiments alone. The issue of class is not such that can be overlooked or such that anyone can say it doesn't matter because it's a serious issue. The truth is that nobody wants to settle for less. I don't know if you want to but I don't. You can imagine an SSCE holder or someone who didn't finish secondary education aspiring to marry a university graduate or someone with a Master. Human needs and wants are just insatiable. It's good for people to dream big but sometimes it doesn't work like that. Why do you think the words he doesn't belong here is in everyday use ?

Even in offices, you find people who work in the same organization equally use such words because we all do not have the same kind of reasoning, education or exposure. What about cases where some young people in love can't marry each other because their parents won't let them as they don't think they are of the same class. I don't want to mention names but I know a particular CEO of a bank who disowned his son for marrying a nobody, according to them. The only thing that can make a relation of this sort work is if the man or woman involved is self established, that way their parents won't interfere much. I'll give you another stunning example where a man whose wife owns three shops and the man forced her to sell those shops because he felt that she was getting richer than him. He actually told his friends his reasons and people were astonished. You know that poverty can cause some people to start thinking like witches and wizards.
