<<周庄>>

内容概要

Zhouzhuang embraces the beauties of all the water towns in China - old bridges, traditional buildings and small streets on the banks of waterways. Its Shuangqiao Bridges (Twin Bridges) became famous worldwide because of the painting Memory of Hometown by well-known painter Chen Yifei (1946-2005) and its display in a New York gallery in 1984. Another bridge in the town, Fu'an Bridge (Wealth and Peace Bridge), is the only existing structure in southeastern China that perfectly combines a single-arch bridge with a bridge tower.

章节摘录

插图：Festival, he returned home to see that gambling was widespread, and some had gambled away their family fortune. Still some had become thieves or opium takers. Ye therefore organized a group of youths to set up a Society of Civilized Festival to tell people the evilness of gamble, superstition and opium. Their efforts helped change the local social atmosphere. In early years, Ye Chucang joined the South Society and Chinese United League, following Dr. Sun Yatsen in the revolution. After the Revolution of 1911, he joined the army to become a chief of staff. After Nanjing was recovered, he left the army and started to run a newspaper in Shanghai together with Yu Youren and Shao Lizi to propagate revolution. Later he became the head of the department of publicity of Kuomintang and the vice president of the Legislative Yuan. Ye Mansion has four sections. A horizontal board inscribed with the characters "Ye Chucang Old Residence" is hung above the beam in the gate hall. Passing through the courtyard paved with granite stone slabs, you come to the tea hall. Displayed in the tea hall are Ye's photos, calligraphic works and manuscripts. Behind the tea hall is the main hall, Zuyintang (Hall of Ancestral Virtue), with carved beams, painted pillars, and splendid decorations. In the chamber tower in the fourth section.
