内容概要

The book presents up-to-date information of general biology, status and conservation on all 92 species of the raptors which have been recorded in China. The first part of the text addresses generally classification, taxonomy, habits, migration, evolution, field identification, raptors and man, threaten, conservation and research of raptors in China. The second part provides individual species accounts that cover such subjects as description, subspecies, distribution, habitat, habits, breeding data, and status, as well as a detailed distribution map. The appendixes to the book are the List of Endangered and Protected Species of Raptors in China, and the Distribution Table of Raptors in China. Many full-color photographs illustrated in the book will appeal to everyone interested in raptors and their endangered existence, whether professional or amateur.
