章节摘录

According to research by Dr. John Blaine of the University of Southern California , relationships between people whose professions largely depend on their appearances , such as models or actors , tend to end much faster than those between lawyers , doctors or students. Blaine said the beautiful felt different from childhood. They are treated as special , which may create both arrogance (傲慢) and insecurity. All too often , beauty can be used as an alternative to education. Often they are pushed out of their class or town , told to go off and make their fortune in Hollywood or London and , when the majority fail , they have few talents (才能) to make a living. Blaine added that beautiful people score poorly on the “ big five ” —— the key factors American experts consider when helping distressed couples. These are neuroticism (神经过敏) , including anger and anxiety ; extroversion (性格外向) ; openness to new experiences ; agreeableness ; and conscientiousness , or sticking by agreements they have made. Attractive people often see no reason to try to change until their looks start to fade. Krista Sutherland , of the University of California Los Angeles , said partnerships that appeared to be perfect from the outside , such as the former “ dream teams ” of Nicole Kidman and Tom Cruise or Hugh Grant and Elizabeth Hurley , where backgrounds and aspirations (抱负) are often shared , did not necessarily lead to happiness.
