章节摘录

插图：Never annoy an Alaskan brown bear. The biggest land meat-eating, animal in the world weighs up to 770 kilos. Brown bears are famous for their bad tempers. They can also run very fast. A running bear can reach 39 mph. That's quicker than a horse. It's certainly quicker than you. Another important fact about bears is that they don't like loud noises. Luckily, Martin Cogey remembered this in time of danger. A bear was trying to kill the 55-year-old Bulgarian in his arms at the time. Mr. Cogey was hunting in the woods near his home in Milkovica when the bear attacked him from behind. Mr. Cogey had a rifle (步枪) but couldn't free his arms to use it. After a struggle, he managed to hit the animal with the butt (枪托) of his gun. The bear let go of him. Somehow Mr. Cogey managed to fire his rifle into the air. A happy end to the story?

Not quite. There's an expression in English, ~ "You are not safe until you are out of the woods." Mr. Cogey was still in the woods. And bears can still run at 30 mph. Mr. Cogey wanted to get away fast. He was in such a hurry that he forgot to put the safety catch (安全掣子) on his rifle. As he climbed to his feet, he slipped and lost his balance. The gun went off again. This time it was pointing directly at Mr. Cogey's head. Some hours later another hunter was walking through the wood. He came across a body lying face down in the leaves. A rifle lay beside it. When he touched the man's head, he felt blood. "Oh no!

" he cried, fearing the worst had happened. At that moment the body came back to life. Mr. Cogey wiped the blood from his eyes. "What happened?"

" he asked. What had happened was like this: The bullet hit Mr. Cogey's.
