<<在中国快乐生活>>

内容概要

Do me a favor, be happy in China! This is the best I can wish for you and for China.

作者简介

Lisa

Carducci has been - cumulatively - a student for 21 years, a language teacher for 30 years, a journalist for 20, but a writer for her all life. Author of 67 books and 3,000 articles in a variety of languages, she has written mostly about China and the Chinese after she established in this country in 1991, following two visits in 1985 and 1989. Born in Canada, she majored in Linguistics at the University of Montreal. In China she taught French and Italian in a Beijing university, worked with China Central Television (overseas service), and later with Beijing Review. Besides her career as a writer, she is an autodidact artist, with 20 exhibitions at her credit.

In 2001, Lisa Carducci was granted the Friendship Award of the People's Republic of China "for her outstanding contribution to the international friendship and her enthusiastic support to the construction of a modern China." In 2005, she was one of the first foreigners in China to be awarded the permanent residence in the PRC.

Several of her publications were awarded internationally.

编辑推荐

In May 2009, the Association of Italian Women of Beijing invited the author to deliver a lecture on this topic. Among the members of the audience were all kinds of non-Chinese: those who wanted to melt into Chinese society and didn't know how, as well as those who were just crossing off an X on their calendars, counting down the days that remained in their suffering. This is when I decided that this little "manual of the newcomer" needed to be written.
