章节摘录

In the last century , new technology improved the lives of many people in many countries. However , one country resisted these changes. High in the Himalayan mountains of Asia , the kingdom of Bhutan remained separate. Its people and Buddhist (佛教) culture had not been affected for almost a thousand years. Bhutan , however , was a poor country. People died at a young age. Most of its people could not read , and they did not know much about the outside world. Then , in 1972 , a new ruler named King Jigme Singye Wangchuck decided to help Bhutan to become modern , but without losing its traditions. King Wangchuck looked at other countries for ideas. He saw that most countries measured their progress by their Gross National Product (GNP) . The GNP measures products and money. When the number of products sold increases people say the country is making progress. King Wangchuck had a different idea for Bhutan. He wanted to measure his country's progress by people's happiness. If the people's happiness increased , the king could say that Bhutan was making progress. To decide if people were happier , he created a measure called Gross National Happiness (GNH) .

GNH is based on certain principles that create happiness. People will be more happier if they have health care , education , and jobs. They are happier when they live in a healthy , protected environment. They are happier when they can keep their traditional culture and customs. Finally , people are happier when they have a good , stable government. Now there is some evidence of increased GNH in Bhutan. People are healthier and are living longer. More people are educated and employed. Twenty-five percent of the land has become national parks , and the country has almost no pollution. The Bhutanese continue to wear their traditional clothing and follow their ancient Buddhist customs. Bhutan has also become a democracy. In 2008 , King Wangchuck gave his power to his son. Although the country still had a king , it held its first democratic elections that year. Bhutan had political parties and political candidates for the first time. Finally , Bhutan has connected to the rest of the world through television and internet. Bhutan is a symbol for social progress , Many countries are now interested in Bhutan's GNH. These countries are investigating their own ways to measure happiness. They want to create new policies that take care of their people , cultures , and land. Brazil may be the next country to use the principles of GNH. Brazilian leaders see the principles of GNH as a source of inspiration. Brazil is a large country with a diverse population. If happiness works as a measure of progress in Brazil , perhaps the rest of the world will follow.
