章节摘录

One of the biggest challenges facing employers and educators today is the rapid advance of globalization. The market place is no longer national or regional , but extends to all comers of the world. And this requires a global-ready workforce. Universities have a large part to play in preparing students for the 21 st century labor market by promoting international educational experiences. The most obvious way universities can help develop a global workforce is by encouraging students to study abroad as part of their course. Students who have experienced another culture firsthand are more likely to be global-ready when they graduate. Global workforce development doesnt always have to involve travel abroad , however. If students learn another language and study other cultures , they will be more global-ready when they graduate. It is important to point out that students also need to have a deep understanding of their own culture before they can begin to observe , analyze and evaluate other cultures. In multi-cultural societies , people can study each others cultures to develop intercultural competencies , such as critical and reflective thinking and intellectual flexibility. This can be done both through the curriculum and through activities on campus outside of the classroom , such as art exhibitions and lectures from international experts. Many universities are already embracing this challenge and providing opportunities for students to become global citizens. Students themselves , however , may not realize that when they graduate , they will be competing in a global labor market. And universities need to raise awareness of these issues amongst undergraduates.
