章节摘录

“ To my soul. No heaven can be for me w I see none , only torture , unless I have your word , Clara.I trust it.I will trust it implicitly.My confidence in you is absolute. ” “ Then you need not be troubled. ” “ It is for.y0u , my love ; thatyou may be armed and strongwhen I am not by to protect you. ‘ ’ ” “ Our views of the world are opposed , Willoughby. ” “ Consent ; gratify me ; swear it.Say , ‘ Beyond death.Whisper it.I ask for nothing more.Women think the hus-band ’ s grave breaks the bond , cuts the tie , sets them loose.They wed the flesh-pah !

What I call on you for is nobility : the transcendeu nobility of faithfulness beyond death ?

Hiswidow !

let them say ; a saint in widowhood. ” “ My vows at the altar must suffice. ” “ You will not ?

Clara !

” “ I am plighted to you. ” “ Not a word ?

—— a simple promise ?

But you love me ?

” “ I have given you the best proof of it that I can. ” “ Consider how utterly I place confidence in you.

” “ I hope it is well placed. ” “ I could kneel to you , to worship you , if you would , Clara !

” “ Kneel to heaven , not to me , Willoughby.I amIwish I were able to tell what I am.I may be inconstant : I do not know myself.Think ; question yourself whether I am really the person you should marry.Your wife should have great qualities of mind and soul.I will consent to hear that I do not possess them , and abide by the verdict. ” “ You do ; you do possess them !

” Willoughby cried. “ When you know better what the world is , you will understand my anxiety.Alive , I am strong to shield you from it ; dead , help- less- that is all.You would be clad in mail , steel-proof , inviolable , if you wouldt ‘ s.
