Chapter 7 Oral Defense

Chapter 8 Sample of Graduation Thesis and Grading Remarks

章节摘录

At most Chinese colleges or universities , undergraduates majoring English language and literature are required of writing an academic thesis in English upon graduation. However , it is not an easy job for most native English-speaking university students to do this , let alone Chinese college students. Writing an academic paper is a rather demanding task even for most successful language learners in any language learning context. Realizing these facts , one might ask- what makes academic writing so difficult ?

Is there any specific guidance for reference ?

These questions had become the original intentions of this book. Graduation thesis writing , as is in the case of ritual composition and literary writing , is a tough mental activity and of great importance. It is particularly true with thesis writing in English which is believed to be a daunting challenge for non-native speakers of English. Though it shares a lot with other styles of English writing , it has its own unique functions , characteristics and demands due to its peculiarity in writing purpose , readership , content and style of writing.
