章节摘录

Whats the first step to getting a job interview ?

Getting past the recruiter. Recruiters are usually your first contact with a potential employer. And they often decide whether your resume lands on the hiring managers desk or in a far off filing cabinet. While it ' s important to know the basic of what recruiters do , you also need to know what they DON ' t do.

After all , you don ' t want an inappropriate request to ruin your chance of an interview. Here are four things you shouldn ' t ask off a recruiter. Dont Be Overly Friendly Sure , recruiters are usually warm , friendly and helpful .After all , their job is to put you at ease and guide you through the hiring process. But theyre professional colleagues. and its crucial that you never forget it.

Think of the recruiter as a respected coworker and treat them accordingly.

Be friendly , but not overly casual or familiar . Its wise to keep personal conversations , jokes and physical contact to a minimum. After a tough interview with a hiring manager , you may be relieved to see a recruiters smiling face. Don ' t be tempted to let your guard down though ; you ' re still " on " .even if the interview has ended. A useful rule of thumb : Don ' t say or do anything in front of a recruiter that you wouldnt say or do in front of your boss (or your mother) . Dont Expect Career Coaching The recruiters goal is not to help you get a job. Its to help you navigate the hiring process at one specific company Recruiters aren ' t career coaches

It ' s not appropriate to ask them to help you craft your cover letter , edit your resume or plan your career path. You Can ask questions about the company or industry in general.
