章节摘录

插图： This is a game designed to practice the comparative form of short adjectives, it is best demonstrated by the teacher first in a plenary session, showing the sort of questions that can be asked, that is, questions with the comparative form of the short adjectives in them. One student could be asked to think of an object and then the teacher could ask the sort of questions that the students have to ask: for example, Is it larger than a tele-vision ?

Is it heavier than a book ?

Is it longer than the table ?

Is it softer than a football ?

etc. If a student thinks they know what it is, they can ask: Is it a ... ?

Then, once the students have got the right idea about the sort of questions they can ask, they can be put into groups of about six. One student must think of an object and the others must ask questions in turn. If a student thinks he knows what the object is, he can ask immediately, Is it a ... ?

If he's right, then he will be the next one to think of an object. If he's wrong, then he must miss his next turn to ask a question.. The group could appoint a secretary each time to take notes on the questions asked, and re-cap after every fifth question. For example, So, it's smaller than a television, it's heavier than a book, it's shorter than the table, it's harder than a football, it's cheaper than a bicycle. Can anyone guess what it is ?

There should be a maximum number of questions asked, say twenty for example, then the group should give up and the student thinking of the object should tell them what it is.
