Editors' Preface Acknowledgment Preface 1 General Introduction 1.1 What this four-volume work consists of: the Avikalpapraśadharāṇī and Kamalaśīla's commentary on it; the Dharmadharmatā-vibhāṅga and commentaries both ancient and modern on it 1.2 The general character of the thought presented in this work: Maitreya's Yogācāra 1.3 Summary of Kamalaśīla's approach (which is also that of the Dharmadharmatā-vibhāṅga) 1.4 Defilements of dharma and dharmatā - that is to say, the factors or elements of phenomenal reality (chos) and reality-itself (chos nyid) - according to Kamalaśīla's Avikalpapraśadharāṇī (summary topic 7.3) 2 Introduction to the Avikalpapraśadharāṇī and its commentary the Avikalpapraśadharāṇī by Kamalaśīla 2.1 Who is Kamalaśīla and what significance does he have here? 2.2 The historicity of the bSam yas debate: Did Kamalaśīla actually engage in a debate? 2.3 The Avikalpapraśadharāṇī was written in Tibet after the writing of the Būiivāṅkrama 2.4 The Avikalpapraśadharāṇī as seen in Buddhist literature 2.5 Gradualists and suddenists both cite the Avikalpapraśadharāṇī 2.6 The Avikalpapraśadharāṇī's "nonfabricating in the mind" may indicate a process of suspension of representational thinking 2.7 Kamalaśīla interprets the Avikalpapraśadharāṇī's "nonfabricating in the mind" (yid la byed pa) to mean "analysis of the real" (yang dag par so so brtag pa) 2.8 Overcoming the given: the yogic practice of the Avikalpapraśadharāṇī 2.9 Meditation for the abandoning of apparent marks and the definition of "nonfabrication in the mind" according to Kamalaśīla: abandoning and nonperception justified through analysis that ascertains entities' lack of inherent nature 3 Translation of the Avikalpapraśadharāṇī 4 Seven Appendices of complete summary topics and longer excerpts from Kamalaśīla's commentary on the Avikalpapraśadharāṇī 5 The Dharmadharmatā-vibhāṅga of Maitreya Bibliography Index Abstract in Chinese
