章节摘录

Virtually all Consumers will have a credit card in their lives. Selecting a credit card should not be something taken lightly; card companies are constantly looking for new consumers, but only after wisely comparing offers should you select a provider. Pick a company that will give you a reasonable rate and one that incentivizes their program with some type of reward for usingtheir card. Almost without fail, rewards cards typically give consumers money back on their purchases or allow you to accumulatepoints toward prizes on future purchases. If you charge $10,000per year and your rewards card pays you a 2% reward onpurchases, you will receive $200 from the company. Usually you will gain the funds in the form of several credits to youraccount spread out over the course of a year, but in some cases you will receive the rewards in the form of a check. Rewards cards are free money?

Only if you do not have to pay an annual fee and you pay your credit card off everymonth. If you do not pay your card off every month, your reward could easily be overshadowed by monthly interest payments, especially if your interest rate is high. Not too many companies payrewards and give you a low rate at the same time. Intheory, even if you carry balances for as little as 2-3 months before paying your card off you could find your rewards for theentire year outweighed by finance charges.
