章节摘录

Not everyone likes organized sports or team sports. If this sounds like you , don't sweat it. We' re going to talk about what keeps some kids from liking sports. With a few changes , you might find out that there is a sport out there that you could like. Sometimes , kids feel that they don't like sport because they may not understand how to play them or they haven't had much practice doing them. Sports can seem complicated because of all the rules and special equipment. Even the fields and courts they play on need different shapes and sizes and have confusing-looking lines drawn on them. People spend many years learning about their favorite sports and practicing how to do them well. So don't feel bad if you don't know the difference between a "corner kick" and a "goal kick" in soccer. If you want to learn more about a sport , you might ask your mom or dad about camps or programs that introduce kids to new sports. These may be better than just joining a team that start playing games right away without much explaining first. Gym class and intramural programs at school can also be a way to try new sports with a mix of kids. Another way to learn about a sport is to watch instructional videos or DVDs or check out library books that explain the rules and offer suggestions for kids learning to play them. ....
