内容概要

The possibilities to design or modify the space in a home can be limited; one faces restrictions on the constructed surface space or the land to build on as well as economic and regulatory limitations. But even so, architects create innovative and original proposals that adapt to the requirements of the owners. The projects presented in this volume are the result of the changes made in private residences. The objective of these interventions is to enlarge spaces, personalize rooms, improve the distribution of space and make its use more rational. The diversity of the typologies that are shown in this book reflects the possibilities that can be developed to achieve these objectives. In this volume, we discover how to make the most out of the space in the home, starting from different buildings that present, in each case, specific particularities.
